This volume is dedicated to the freedom of spirit possessed by the leaders of our community. We need these men whose vitality and clear values have lead us forward in our understanding and participation in the world. Within each of us is that same potential and within each of us lies the responsibility to direct that potential towards the freedom to act in accordance with our values.

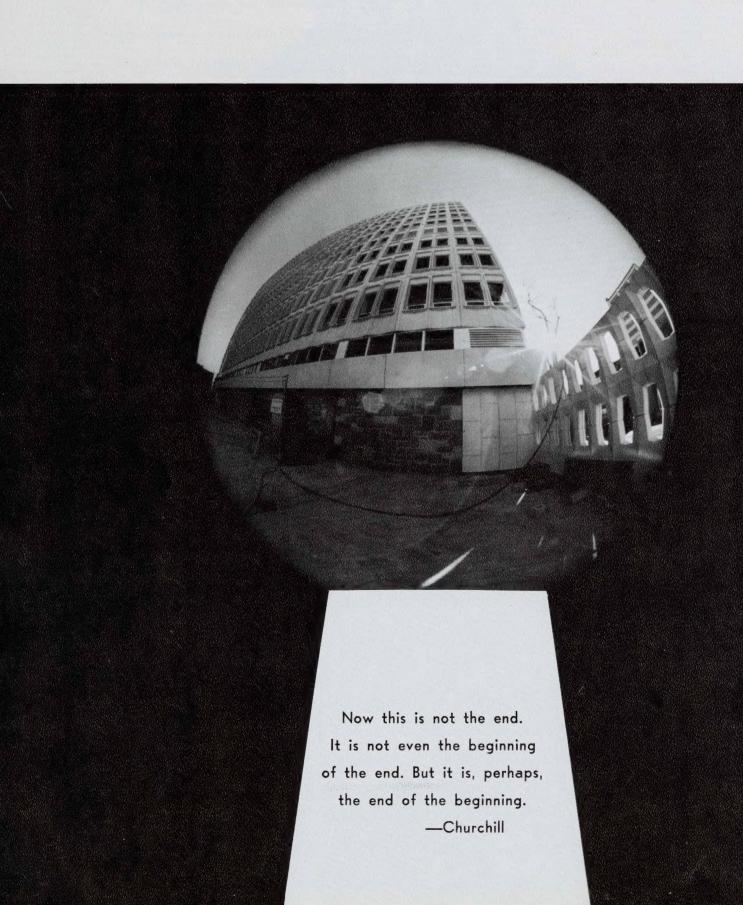

To His Worship, Mayor Jean Drapeau and to those who can share this freedom of spirit — this book is dedicated.

The fundamental educational philosophy of Sir George Williams University is that its chief concern shall be the development of persons, through the medium of formal education and its correlated activities. It is recognized that this is not accomplished by mere rote learning. While the subject matter of the curriculum is divided into "courses" for the sake of convenience in administration, the primary aim of the University is that students shall grow in character and personality as well as in those techniques and appreciations which may be required in full and satisfactory living. The units which go to make up such growth may be conveniently classified as attitudes, abilities, and skills. It is the development of these that the University endeavours to foster in its students.

This principle is not in the least opposed to good scholarship.

On the contrary, scholarship can be sound only when it is vital, when it is a living process. For example, attitudes, or ways of feeling toward individuals, institutions, and other elements of one's environment, are as much a part of a person's growth as is the attainment of information, important though this may be.

convocation

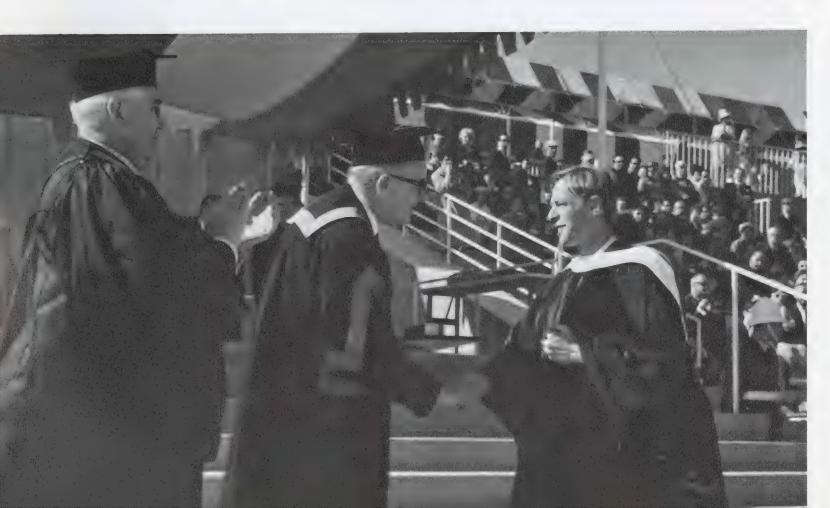

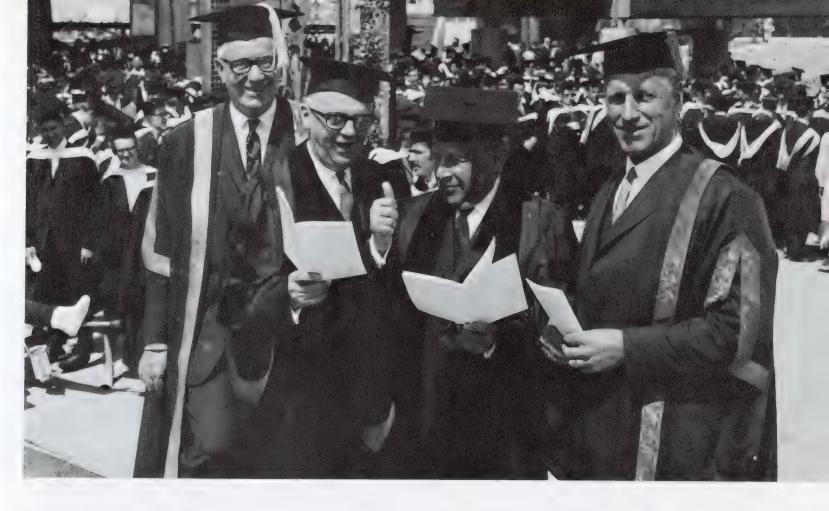

May 28th, 1967 — 910 black caps and gowns populate the square. But the day is bright and warm in spite of the brisk breeze. 910 youthful faces beam their joy and excitement on this very special day.

Place des Nations is a fitting place for convocation. Here, world leaders convene and through the medium of Expo, their countries exchange ideas. It is here at Expo that our graduates become a part of the stimulating world of communication. For most of them, graduation is the final exercise of university discipline. It is a time of recollection, each quietly recalling his life as a student, savouring the moments of pleasure and pressure. It is a time of personal accomplishment, with parents, relatives, and friends to share the joy of achievement. It is a time of pride and loyalty to the leaders of our university and our community, men such as Mayor Jean Drapeau and Expo Commissioner General, Pierre Dupuy. It is a climax of many years as a student.

Handshakes follow the awarding of diplomas and the graduates commingle with the crowd. The apprenticeship is over and Sir George Williams University has introduced nine hundred and ten individuals into the world.

MODERN DANCE AND DRAMA

Modern dance strives to show love through a movement of an arm, weakness by a hunched body, strength by a powerful gait. Its essence is to convey the elements of human experience. its highly personal mode of communication is essential in a world which is fast becoming too impersonal, too unwilling to listen.

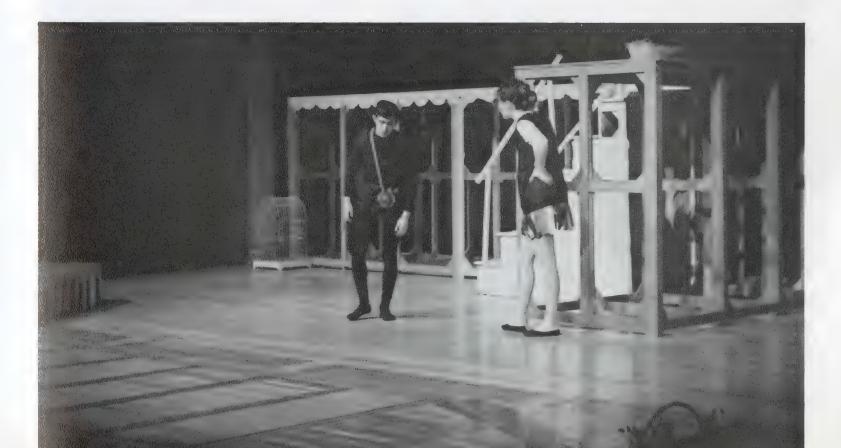

Enter, drama, from stage left to the world of comic manners, social comment, and tragic emotions. The drama group provides the opportunity to evoke the sensitive thoughts and insights of a Brecht, a Miller, or a Beckett —what we have been, what we are, and what we hope to be.

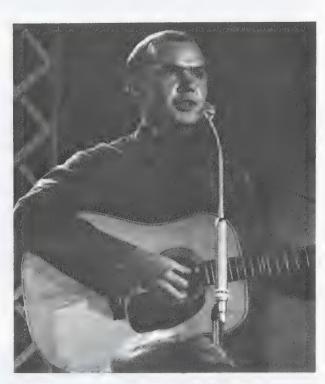

University campuses are a perennial haven for folk music. At Sir George, a variety of instruments and voices chanting blue grass, blues or drinking songs have told the stories of what people think and do, how they hate, love, and live.

Friday night poetry readings brought together established and up-and-coming poets. Eager audiences encountered and reacted to their diverse styles and themes ranging from melancholy to ecstasy. Discussions were moderated by Professor Roy Kiyooka, who published his first volume of poems, Kyoto Airs, in 1964.

International Festival Week is a series of dinners, films, concerts and dances. Sir George students of varied ethnic origin attempt to promote student understanding and fellowship.

The topic of the 8th annual international Seminar was "The Military in Contemporary Society". Each of the six speakers, authorities on current social issues, presented his point of view on the political understanding and use of military force.

Mr. Bert Cochran, currently preparing a biographical study of Adlai Stevenson, opened the Seminar by assessing the military and its relation to political reality. Following Mr. Cochran, Dr. Stephen Ambrose, Associate Professor at John Hopkins University, spoke on "The Relationship Between War and Politics". Advocating the "Unarmed Forces", Dr. Arthur Waskow placed the burden of peaceful international relations on co-operation, equal power, and effective internal, political change. Visiting Professor of Economics at Sir George, Dr. Rudolf Schlesinger talked of "The Military and Economic Planning in Communist and Non-Communist States". Mr. Phillipe Devillers, author of Histoire du Viet Nam de 1914-1952, discussed "The Military as an Approach to the Solution of International Problems" and Dr. Eric Hobsbawn ended the Seminar by presenting the issue of "Civilians vs Military in 20th Century Politics." (As an additional aspect to the seminar, a panel, moderated by Rod Dewer of CJAD, discussed "The Military in Emerging African Nations".)

THE BASIC PROBLEM IS . . .

Is what? Each of the speakers who visited Sir George this year broached urgent political problems. Paul Martin, Laurier Lapierre, Stokely Carmichael and Walter Gordon confronted a responsive, although often unruly student audience who posed questions and constantly aroused provocative dialogues.

THE RIGHT

Student protest — violence — counterdemonstration —All across the nation the new vibration is the attempt to voice malcontent: students demand an active part in their community — students phrase their demand in meetings, marches, and pickets. Students demand their right to dissent!

Early February. Lecture attendance drops. Anticipation runs high; a sense of excitement pervades every phase of student life. Winter Carnival is the compression of many student activities into one hectic week of fun. Nights out, days up north, dances, hockey games, and the crowning of the carnival queen, all give the student a chance to let go of his inhibitions and enjoy himself fully.

A merry-go-round of parties and events allows the Georgian to forget — at least for a week — the looming spectre of final exams.

43. DECORUM IN A DEBATE. In debate a member must confine himself to the question before the assembly, and avoid personalities. He cannot reflect upon any act of the assembly, unless he intends to conclude his remarks with a motion to rescind such action, or else while debating such a motion. In referring to another member, he should, as much as possible, avoid using his name, rather referring to him as "the member who spoke last," or in some other way describing him. The officers of the assembly should always be referred to by their official titles. It is not allowable to arraign the motives of a member, but the nature or consequences of a measure may be condemned in strong terms. It is not the man, but the measure, that is the subject of the debate.

A moment of tension, infinite potential released, the strain, the lunge... the movement complete. It seems effortless. Yet, each sport demands concentration, weeks of persistence, perhaps a moment of relaxation but always the loneliness of the long distance runner...

Suffering from constant injuries during the season, ineligibility rulings, and lack of height, Coach Fred Whitacre's varsity basketball team ended the regular season with a 4-12 win loss record. But still, the grace of the athlete can never be denied: if you dribble and fight for the ball; run pace for pace and jump for inches; work for the chance to shoot, and shoot; make the aggressive move to drive and then drive . . . the ball must go in.

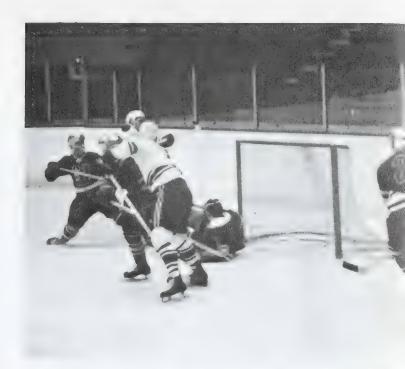

Trevor Kerr—Left Wing

Bob Berry—Right Wing

Brian Chapman
—Goalkeeper

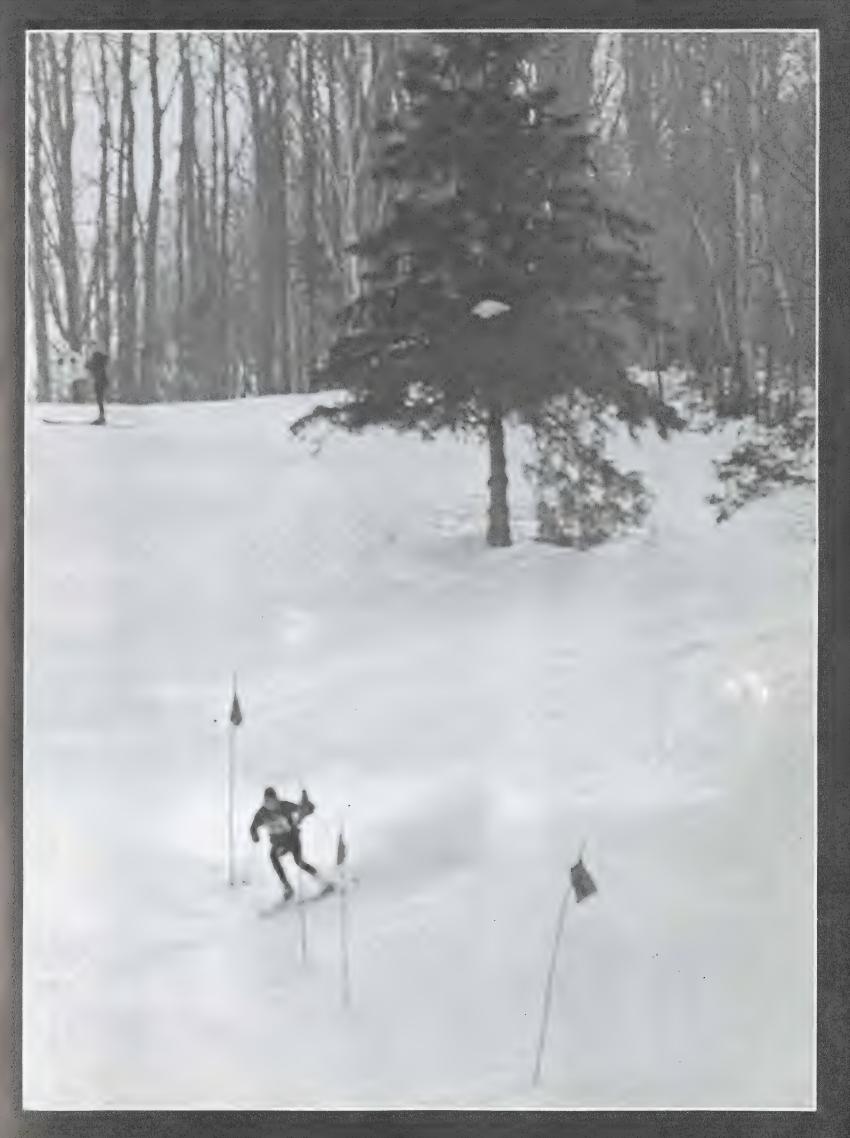

Hours of skating, stick work, frustrated attacks, donnybrooks and hard hockey: but balanced hockey comes only from rugged wings, aggressive defensemen, the poised goalie, heady centreplay... and faithful screaming suporters. Without home ice facilities, Paul Arsenault's varsity completed a 16-2 season and retained their OSLAA title, defeating Loyola 5-4.

October 14, 1966

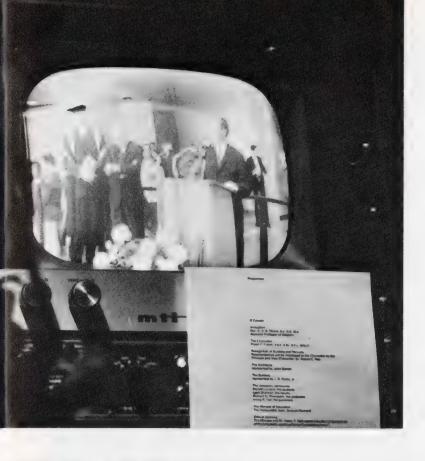

The fourteen story monolithic structure covers a whole city block — an exciting concept for an urban university. One October afternoon at four o'clock, the curious stray to watch officials assembling in academic dress. Students witness a significant event as representatives of fifteen building trades receive certificates of achievement from the principal and chancellor.

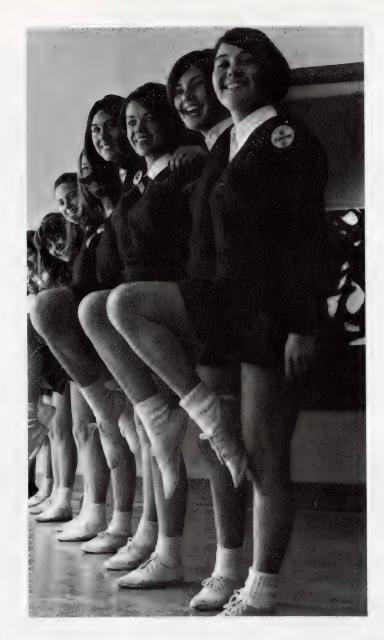

Speeches are brief. Dr. Henry
F. Hall and Mr. Jean Jacques Bertrand cut the ribbon and the rumbling escalator carries them into the officially opened Henry F. Hall Building.

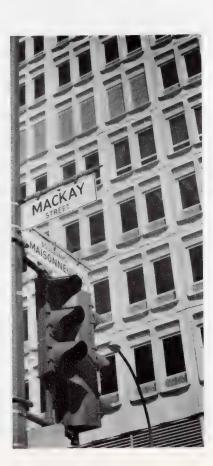

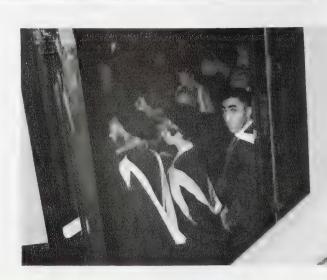

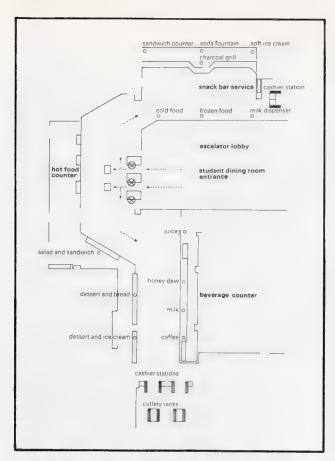

A dark vaid stage audience drawn by action energy radiating from art form the motion lights tension curtain.

No professor is like another. Michael Brian is outgoing and flamboyant; Dean Madras is shy and quietly capable. Roy Kiyooka's interest is in creative writing and painting while Mervin Butovsky and Donald Peets generate classes which constantly attract students. These are only some of the erudite men who are our professors.

In our computer world, instructors seem almost irrelevent. Yet, a social encounter and a quiet chat proves these men are accessible and human.

Time is quiet
ideas without sound
Solitude becomes reality when concepts enter time.

The interlocking of systems of technology without the direct check of personal acquaintance and use and political prudence creates a series of booby traps. Human scale may be quite disregarded, the time and energy that people actually have, the space they need to move in, and the rhythm or randomness with which they best operate. As the engineers design, we move, or sometimes can't move. Facilities are improved, but during the transition everybody is inconvenienced, and by the time the facility is completed it may be obsolescent. Fast trips are made possible by jet, but they prove to chop up our lives, to involve longer trips to airports and more waiting in terminals, so we have less free time. Business machines are installed and there is no longer any person from whom to get information or service for one's particular case. Cities spread so far that one can't get out of them; the country is deserted, so it is inefficient to provide means to get to it. Immense printing presses and other means of communication are devised, but to warrant such an investment of capital requires a mass audience, and it becomes hard to publish a serious book or transmit a serious message.

—The Moral Ambiguity of America Paul Goodman/The Massey Lectures for 1966

The proper course of action is clear. The college and university community must retain personnel authority for the education it provides and for the research it undertakes. The needs of the industrial system must always be secondary to the cultivation of general understanding and perception. Similarly, support for research and scholarship must be in accordance with some natural distribution of human curiosity and competence. It will be urged that this is a counsel of perfection. It is, and it suggests how readily we assume that education and research must be subordinate to the needs of the industrial system. But they need not be subordinate if it is realized that the educator is a figure of power in this context. He is the source of the factor of accordation on which industrial system but on behalf of the entire human personality.

—The Industrial State Kenneth Galbraith

Letter from the Editor

A yearbook can never present a complete record of student activities because it is conceived in the mind of the editor. At best, he can recall the more significant events but, more than likely most of these happenings will be forgotten. The yearbook is intended to remind the student that university was not only an esoteric world of concepts and facts.

Working with this purpose in mind, I have tried to capture moments at Sir George as seen through the eyes of candid photographers. I hope that what is conveyed is a mood expressing the personality of this university.
